Markhashi

UWP: A3018CB-B • Stellar Data: Binary system (main-sequence primary with an orbiting neutron star)

Diameter: ~4,800 km • Atmosphere: Vacuum • Hydrosphere: 0% (ice locked)

Population: Hundreds of millions (primary and moon combined)

Government: Civil Service Bureaucracy • Law Level: 11 (extremely restrictive)

Tech Level: B (average Imperial standard)

Markhashi is a small, airless world locked in a binary orbit with its slightly larger and more habitable moon. Both bodies orbit the barycenter of the system, which lies in open space between them. The system is visually dramatic due to its neutron star companion devouring its aging stellar partner, casting radiation halos and gravitational waves throughout the local space.

Colonized from nearby Ishkur, Markhashi's society is defined by rigidity, surveillance, and inherited authority. Personal freedoms are sharply curtailed—nearly all aspects of life, from marriage (arranged exclusively by parents) to career and clothing, are predetermined by a combination of family elders and state bureaucracy. Even reproduction is scheduled and licensed. Weapons are strictly forbidden; not only are they illegal in public, but any object formally classified as a weapon is also illegal to possess within the home.

Religiously, the Markhashi population adheres to a native dualist theology that emphasizes balance through opposition—light and dark, obedience and rebellion, flesh and spirit. The faith plays a subtle but omnipresent role in public architecture and holidays.

While the planet's surface is marked by harsh, frozen plateaus and glacial canyons, water exists only in the form of deep crustal ice. Human habitation is fully dependent on sealed, pressurized arcologies. The world's moon—unnamed in common parlance and often just called "the Sister"—is fractionally more habitable, but also poorer and without a proper starport. Its cultural and legal structures mirror Markhashi almost exactly, functioning like a dual-world society.

Despite the authoritarian atmosphere, tourism is modestly promoted via three state-preserved sites:

- The Southern Ice Cap – considered sacred in the local dualist religion.
- The Whispering Road – an ancient colonization-era road preserved under vacuum conditions.
- The Memory Field Cemetery – a vast ceremonial necropolis regarded as a pilgrimage site; every Federation citizen is encouraged to visit once in their lifetime.

Travelers should exercise extreme caution—failure to comply with local ordinances can result in indefinite detention without trial.
